Battleship Oregon's Trial Trip Was

A Great Success.

San Francisco, Nov. 27—The battleship Oregon, which went to sea for a short crusse last Saturday, returned yesterday. Furing the trip, which was extended as far south as Monterey, all the gains were tested with foll-service charges, the great pieces working beautifully.

There were eight 13-inch charges, six teen of the S-inch, eight of the 6-inch, thirty word the 6-pounder and eight of the first landers.

The Fourth-Class Postmaster, the official organ of the postmasters, is circulating a petition throughout the country, asking for the extension of the civil service rules, so as to include these offices. This paper is receiving thousands of signers. The various Congressmen are being urged to use their influence with the President, and, altogether, every string is being pulled by the postmasters and their friends. friends.

For the past twelve years or more it has been customary for the incoming President to make wholeade dismissais of fourth class postmasters and to fill the vacances; these caused with men of his own political belief. During President Cleveland's first administration Adial E. Stevenson, as the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, carned for himself the name of Axman on account of the vigorous namer in which he lopped off the official heads of the postmasters of the smaller offices.

It was nothing unusual for 200 removals to be made in a single day, and the record was kept up until more than 40,000 Republicans had been turned out and their positions filled with Democrats. Gen. Clarkson followed the same course under I resident Harrison, and all of the Democrats who have been appointed under President Cleveland were summerily ejected from office, but when Mr. Cleveland was again elected the Ropublican fourth class postmasters were retired as rapidly as the department could make the changes and pet Democrats in their places. In speaking of this subject today, a member of the Civil Service Commission said:
"Our present machinery is not in condition to take care of the large number of fourth-class postoffices. They present too many phases to be grouped together and governed by one set of rules. I would suggest that the best planto reform the fourth-lass restiffice system would be to make gest that the best planter reform the fourth-class postoffice system would be to apply, so far as possible, the consulidation scheme that has been introduced so successfully. I would divide the 60,000 offices into two classes, into one of which I would place the offices paying less than $300 a year. I would consolidate these offices with the nearest large residing and place a elect-Ground Being Selected for One at Indianapolis.
